PART I

GENERAL

1.0.1 These regulations shall be known as the "Gas Code."

1.0.2 These regulations shall be observed during the installation of any gas-piping and gas appliances to assure safety.

1.0.3 (a) No person shall install, or cause to be installed, any gas appliance that does not bear the approval seal of a testing agency.

(b) The provisions of subsection (a) need not apply to an appliance about to be reinstalled within the Province without change of ownership. An appliance so reinstalled shall have been examined and repaired where necessary and certified to be in safe working condition by a licensed gas-fitter.

1.0.4 Testing Agencies.—The following testing agencies are approved by the Minister: British Columbia Research Council, American Gas Association, and Gas Inspection Branch of the Department of Public Works.

1.0.5 All house-piping appliances and vents within the scope of the Act shall be for new installations such as are sanctioned by these regulations; existing installations, if found unsafe or if to be replaced, shall be replaced with equipment sanctioned by these regulations.

1.0.6 The Chief Engineer-Surveyor may require that work shall be done in conformity with higher standards than specified in these regulations if, at his discretion, he deems that such higher standards are reasonably necessary in the interest of safety.

1.0.7 All gas used in places of public, institutional, or domestic occupancy shall be odorized. The odour shall be detectable in any location in any size room when not more than 1 per cent of the volume of the room is odorized gas.

1.1 Scope

These regulations govern the installation of gas-piping and gas appliances in buildings and apply only to low-pressure gas-piping systems in buildings, extending from the gas-meter outlet to the inlet connections of appliances, and the installation and operation of residential and commercial gas appliances supplied through such system by public utilities. They are intended to cover the design, fabrication, installation, tests, and operation of such systems for fuel-gases such as natural gas, manufactured gas, liquified petroleum gas-air or mixtures thereof. They are not intended to cover systems distributing undiluted liquified petroleum gas. They are also not intended to cover systems or portions of systems supplying equipment engineered, designed, and installed for specific manufacturing, production, processing, and power-generating applications, such as large and high-pressure boilers, melting and treating furnaces, production ovens, etc.

Piping in gas-distributing systems, in gas-manufacturing plants, in gas-compressing stations, and in gas-processing plants shall be governed by the regulations under the "Boiler and Pressure-vessel Act."

1.2 Work on Gas-piping Containing Unmeasured Gas

1.2.1 Gas Company's Main.—No person other than a duly authorized employee of the gas company or a person having permission of the gas company shall open or make connections with a gas-main.

1.2.2 Service-pipe.—No person other than a duly authorized employee of the gas company or a person having permission of the gas company shall repair, alter, open, or make connection to the service-pipe, or do any other work on the parts of the gas-supply system up to and including the meter.

1.2.3 Gas Company's Meter.—No person other than a duly authorized employee of the gas company or a person having permission of the gas company shall disconnect the inlet of the gas-meter, nor move the meter. A gas-fitter may disconnect the outlet of a meter from the house-piping only when necessary. He shall remake the joint at the meter outlet, and shall turn the meter on again only after testing the piping, making sure no other outlets are open.

1.2.4 Notify Gas Company of Any Repairs Needed.—In case any work done by a gas-fitter discloses the need for repairs or alterations by the gas company on any part of the supply system containing unmeasured gas, the gas company shall be notified promptly of this fact.

1.2.5 Notify Gas Company of Any Leaks.—If gas is leaking from any part of the gas-supply system containing unmeasured gas, a gas-fitter not in the employ of the gas company may make necessary temporary repairs and shall promptly notify the gas company to make permanent repairs.

1.3 Qualified Installing Agency

Installation, replacement, or repair of gas-piping, appliances, or vents shall be undertaken only by a gas-fitter.

1.4 Precautions

1.4.1 Turn Gas Off.—All gas-piping or gas-appliance installations shall be performed with the gas turned off to eliminate hazards from leakage of gas.

1.4.2 Notification of Interrupted Service.—It shall be the duty of the gas-fitter to notify all affected consumers when the gas-supply is to be turned off. It shall also be the duty of the gas-fitter to renotify all affected consumers before the gas is turned on again, and to check carefully all outlets and pilots, making sure they are relighted or securely turned off.

1.4.3 Before Turning Gas Off or On.—Before turning off the gas at the meter, all burner and pilot valves on the premises supplied with gas through the meter shall be turned off and the meter test hand-observed for a sufficient length of time to ascertain that there is no gas passing through the meter. Where there is more than one meter on the premises, precautions shall be exercised to assure that the proper meter is turned off. When turning the gas on, it shall not be left on, nor appliances relighted until the test dial on the meter shows no movement as in 2.11.2. This shall not be construed as replacing the testing procedure laid down in 2.10.

1.4.4 Checking for Gas Leaks.—No matches, candles, flame, or other sources of ignition shall be employed to check for gas leakage from meters, piping, or appliances. Checking for gas leakage with a soap and water solution is recommended. (See provisions of 2.10 and 2.11.)

1.4.5 Use of Lights.—Artificial illumination used in connection with a search for gas leakage shall be restricted to electric hand safety flashlights, fixed electric lights controlled only by switches remote from the area of the leakage, or approved safety-lamps.

1.4.6 Working Alone.—An individual shall not work alone in any situation where the nature of work is such as to expose him to an undue hazard.

1.4.7 Handling of Liquid from Drips.—Liquid which is removed from a drip in existing gas-piping shall be handled with proper precautions and shall not be left on the consumer's premises. Disused gas-piping shall be stored outside in open air.

1.4.8 No Smoking.—Smoking shall not be permitted during work on piping which contains or has contained gas.

1.4.9 Work Interruptions.—When interruptions in work occur, the system shall be left in a safe condition.

PART II

2.1 Application for Permit

2.1.1 (a) Application for Permit.—Before any person commences the installation or alteration of any house-piping, appliance, or vent in any premises, he shall submit to a Local Inspector an application in writing, giving a description of the work to be done and particulars of the number and kinds of appliances, and of the size and length of house-piping, and of the size, length, kind, and location of the vent proposed to be installed or altered.

(b) Expiry.—If, after the issuance of any permit, the work authorized is not commenced within ninety days, such permit shall be cancelled. Under extenuating circumstances, the Local Inspector may extend the said period for a further period of ninety days.

2.1.2 Piping Plan.—The Local Inspector may, at his discretion, demand from applicant for a permit a sketch or plan of the proposed gas installation, showing the sizes and location of all gas piping, appliances, and vents. When an additional appliance is to be served through an extension of present piping, capacity of the existing lines shall be verified by the Local Inspector.

2.2 Meter Location

2.2.1 All meters shall be installed as close to the point of entry of the service-pipe to the building as is practicable.

2.2.2 No meter shall be placed in a position that is not readily accessible for examination, reading, and replacement, and away from moisture, uncovered flames, excessive heat or cold, or mechanical damage.

2.2.3 Every riser in any building having more than two meters shall be marked with a suitable metal tag clearly indicating the number of the room, apartment, or section of the building which it serves.

2.2.4 No person other than a duly authorized employee of the gas company shall disconnect any gas-meter for any purpose whatsoever, or make any alteration, addition, or change in any service-pipe.

2.3 Interconnections

Where two or more meters are installed on the same premises but supply separate consumers, the piping systems shall not be interconnected on the outlet side of the meters.

2.4 Size of Piping to Gas Appliance

2.4.1 Pressure-loss.—The gas-piping system shall be designed so that the loss in pressure between the meter and any appliance shall not exceed 0.3-inch water-column, and in no instance shall a piping system be designed or installed to provide a maximum output of less than 30 cubic feet per hour.

2.4.2 Size of Piping.—All gas-piping shall be of a diameter sufficient to carry the volume of gas required for the distances to be run in accordance with Table 2, which gives the volume of gas in cubic feet per hour that can be carried by various diameters and lengths of pipe with a pressure drop of 0.3-inch water-column (specific gravity 0.6). In using this table no allowance for an ordinary number of fittings is necessary. If the specific gravity of gas is not 0.6, multiply the cubic feet per hour of Table 2 by the factor corresponding to the specific gravity in Table 3. Consult the gas company for the specific gravity of the gas.

No piping of less than  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch diameter shall be used as a main gas-supply to any kitchen.

2.4.3 Gas Consumption.—The volume of gas to be provided for (in cubic feet per hour) shall be determined whenever possible, directly from the manufacturer's B.t.u. ratings of the appliances which will be installed and the heating value of the gas to be used. In case the ratings of the appliances to be installed are not known, Table 1 is given to show the approximate consumption of average appliances of certain types in B.t.u. per hour.

To obtain the cubic feet per hour of gas required, divide the total B.t.u. input of all appliances by the average B.t.u. heating value per cubic foot of gas. The B.t.u. per cubic foot of gas may be obtained from the gas company.

2.4.4 Diversity Factor.—The diversity factor is the percentage of the total connected load in use at any one time and is an important factor in determining the correct pipe size. It is dependent upon the number and kinds of gas appliances being installed. For diversity factor consult the Local Inspector.

2.4.5 Extensions.—Extensions to existing piping, or installation of additional appliances, shall be made in such a way that the completed installation shall conform with the provisions of 2.4.1 and 2.4.2.

2.5 Materials

2.5.1 Acceptable Piping Material.—Gas-piping in buildings shall be wrought-iron or steel pipe. All pipe-fittings (except shut-off valves) shall be malleable iron or steel when used with wrought-iron or steel pipe.

Gas piping and fittings shall be clear and free from cutting burrs and defects in structure or threading, and shall be thoroughly brushed and the scale blown.

Defects in pipe or fittings shall not be repaired. When defective pipe or fittings are located in a system, the defective pipe or fittings shall be replaced.

(NOTE.—Welding of gas-piping to be checked by the Local Inspector.)

2.5.2 Pipe-coating.—When in contact with material exerting a corrosive action, piping and fittings coated with a corrosion-resisting material shall be used.

2.5.3 Use of Old Pipe.—Pipe, fittings, valves, etc., removed from any existing installation shall not be used again until they have been thoroughly cleaned, inspected, and ascertained to be equivalent to new material.

Old or used piping shall not be used for gas-piping, except that which has been used for conveying gas.

2.5.4 Joint Compounds.—Joint compounds (pipe dope) shall be applied sparingly and only to the male threads of the joints. Such compounds shall be resistant to the action of L.P. gas-air mixtures.

2.6 Pipe Threads

2.6.1 Specifications for Pipe Threads.—Pipe and fitting threads shall comply with the American Standard for Pipe Threads, A.S.A. B2.1.1945.

2.6.2 Damaged Threads.—Pipe and threads which are stripped, chipped, corroded, or otherwise damaged shall not be used. If a weld opens during the operation of cutting or threading, that portion of the pipe shall not be used.

2.6.3 Number of Threads.—Pipe shall be threaded in accordance with Table 4.

2.7 Concealed Piping

2.7.1 Minimum Size.—No pipe smaller than standard  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch iron-pipe size shall be used in any concealed location.

2.7.2 Piping in Corrosive Locations.—(a) Piping in contact with earth, concrete, masonry, corrosive materials, or in damp locations shall be protected against corrosion in an approved manner.

(b) Piping shall not be laid in cinders or on the surface of the earth. Piping shall not be run or laid in contact with pipes which may sweat.

(c) No gas-piping shall be concealed in any location where large quantities of corrosive chemicals are used, such as engravers, battery-shops, plating-shops, etc. In doubtful conditions the Local Inspector shall be consulted.

2.7.3 Piping in Concrete or Masonry Floors.—House-piping shall not be installed in solid floor slabs such as concrete or masonry unless the Local Inspector determines there is no other practical manner of installing such piping. For this type of floor construction, the house-piping shall be installed above the floor, in an open or furred space, hollow wall, attic space, or pipe-chase.

Where the Local Inspector determines that it is not practical to avoid the installation of piping in solid floors, then one of the following methods of installation, when approved by the Local Inspector, shall be followed:—

(a) House-piping may be installed in a casing of iron pipe with tightly sealed ends and joints. The casing shall extend at least 2 inches beyond the point where the pipe emerges from the floor. Where required, the casing shall be vented to the outside atmosphere.

(b) House-piping may be installed in a channel in the floor. Such channel is to be suitably covered so as to permit ready access to the piping and prevent the entrance of corrosive materials, or it may be filled with some non-corrosive material which can be removed with a minimum of damage to the floor.

2.7.4 Connections in Original Installations.—When installing piping which shall be concealed, unions, running threads, right and left couplings, bushings, and swing joints made by combinations of fittings shall not be used.

2.7.5 Reconections.—When necessary to insert fittings in piping which has been installed in a concealed location, the piping may be reconnected by the use of a ground joint union with the nut centre-punched to prevent loosening by vibration.

2.8 Installation of Piping

2.8.1 Building Structure.—In the installation of gas-piping, no girder, beam, joist, or other member of a building shall be cut in such a manner as to reduce its strength below that required for the purpose for which it was intended.

2.8.2 Piping to Be Graded.—All piping shall be graded not less than one-quarter inch in 15 feet to prevent traps. All horizontal lines shall grade to risers and from the risers to the meter or to the appliance.

2.8.3 Supporting Pipe.—Gas-piping shall not be supported by other piping, but shall be supported to maintain proper grade with pipe-hooks, metal pipe straps, bands, or hangars suitable for the size of pipe, and of proper strength and quality, at proper intervals so that the piping cannot be moved accidentally from the installed position.

Spacing of supports in piping installations shall not be greater than the following:—

	Ft.
½-inch pipe .....	6
¾-inch pipe or 1-inch pipe .....	8
1¼-inch or larger (horizontal) .....	10
1¼-inch or larger (vertical), every floor level.

2.8.4 Hanging from Pipe.—Nothing shall be hung from or supported by gas-piping.

2.8.5 Protect against Freezing.—Gas-piping shall be protected against freezing temperatures. When piping must be exposed to wide ranges or sudden changes in temperature, special care shall be taken to prevent stoppages by condensation.

Gas-piping shall not be installed above grade on the outside.

2.8.6 Avoid Clothes-chutes, etc.—Gas-pipe inside any building shall not be run in or through an air-duct, clothes-chute, chimney or flue, ventilating-duct, dumb-waiter, or elevator-shaft.

2.8.7 Overhanging Rooms.—Where there are overhanging kitchens or other rooms built beyond foundation walls, in which gas appliances are installed, care shall be taken to avoid placing the piping where it will be exposed to low temperatures (40° F. or below for manufactured gas) or to extreme changes of temperature.

2.8.8 Do Not Bend Pipe.—Pipe shall not be bent. Fittings shall be used when making turns in gas-piping.

2.8.9 Provide Drip Where Necessary.—A drip shall be provided at any point in the line of pipe where condensate may collect. Where condensation is excessive, a drip shall be provided at the outlet of the meter. This drip shall be so installed as to constitute a trap wherein an accumulation of condensate will shut off the gas before it will run back into the meter.

2.8.10 Location and Size of Drips.—All drips shall be installed only in such locations that they will be readily accessible to permit cleaning or emptying. A drip shall not be located where the condensate is likely to freeze. The size of any drip used shall be determined by the capacity and the exposure of the piping which drains to it, and shall not be of smaller diameter than the pipe to which it is attached.

2.8.11 Use Tee.—A tee-fitting with the bottom outlet plugged or capped instead of an elbow-fitting shall be used at the bottom of any riser to catch any dirt or other foreign materials. (See Fig. 1 in Code Book.)

2.8.12 Cap All Outlets.—Each outlet, including a shut-off valve outlet, shall be securely closed gas-tight with a threaded iron plug or cap immediately after installation, and shall be left closed until an appliance is connected thereto. When an appliance is removed from an outlet, the outlet shall be capped or plugged with a screwed-joint fitting.

2.8.13 Location of Outlets.—The unthreaded portion of piping outlets shall extend at least 1 inch through finished ceilings and walls, and when extending through floors shall be not less than 2 inches above them. The outlet fittings or the pipe shall be securely fastened. Outlets shall not be placed behind doors. Outlets shall be far enough from floors and walls to permit the use of a pipe-wrench of suitable size without straining or bending the pipe.

2.8.14 Prohibited Devices.—No device shall be placed inside the gas-pipe or fittings that will reduce the cross-sectional area or otherwise obstruct the free flow of gas.

2.8.15 Branch Pipe Connection.—Where a branch outlet is placed on a main supply-line before it is known what size of pipe will be connected to it, the outlet shall be of the same size as the line which supplies it.

2.8.16 Piping between Buildings.—All gas-piping running from one building to another building shall be connected on the outlet or house side of the meter, and shall be provided with a shut-off valve immediately after the point of connection within the house, and such lines shall be covered to a minimum depth of 15 inches underground. All underground piping shall be galvanized, shall be not less than 1-inch pipe, and shall be provided with suitable drips or other fittings for the removal of condensation. The outside of the pipe shall be protected against corrosion with asphaltic coating or other approved material.

2.8.17 Gas-piping shall not be on the outside of any building.

2.8.18 Gas-piping shall not be installed within 3 inches of any wire carrying electrical current unless such wire is enclosed in conduit.

2.9 Gas Shut-off Valve

2.9.1 Accessibility of Gas-valves.—Main gas shut-off valves controlling several piping systems shall be placed at an adequate distance from each other, so that they will be easily accessible for operation, and shall be installed so as to be protected from injury. They shall be plainly marked with a metal tag by the installer so that the piping systems supplied through them can be readily identified. A shut-off valve shall be placed at every point where safety, convenience of operation, and maintenance demand.

2.9.2 Shut-off Valves for All Gas Outlets.—All gas outlets shall be provided with a lever-handled shut-off valve of a ground plug type, made of good-quality brass, and shall be provided with a check-pin or stop-on-key, and shall be easy to operate and test tight under 10 pounds pressure, which shall be considered as part of the general house-piping, and shall be located as close as practical to the proposed location, on the meter side of the union of the appliance, but in any event it shall be easily accessible. Where tubing is installed, a shut-off valve shall be installed at a point where the tubing is connected to the piping.

2.10 Inspection and Testing of Gas-piping

2.10.1 Contractor Shall Notify Local Inspector.—Upon the completion of any system of gas-piping and before any part of the system is concealed or used, the contractor shall notify the Local Inspector that such work is ready for inspection.

2.10.2 Authority of Local Inspector.—A Local Inspector may at any time inspect any premises to determine the condition of any house-piping, appliance, vent, or to ascertain whether work is carried out in full compliance with the provisions of these regulations.

2.10.3 Rough Piping.—No rough piping shall be covered or concealed in any manner until it has been tested and approved by the Local Inspector.

2.10.4 Testing.—All gas-piping shall be tested, in the presence of the Local Inspector, by subjecting all piping to an air test of two and one-half times the maximum working-pressure or a pressure of 10 pounds per square inch (p.s.i.), whichever is the greater, without a pressure-loss over a fifteen-minute period.

The testing equipment shall be supplied by the contractor, and shall consist of a manifold carrying one low-pressure air-gauge of 4-inch diameter, with a range not to exceed 15 pounds, with a suitable outlet for the installation of a similar gauge to be provided by the Local Inspector, and a ¼-inch petcock with a female thread for the use of the Local Inspector.

To test for tightness, the piping may be filled with city gas, air, or inert gas, but not with any other gas or liquid.

In no case shall oxygen ever be used.

2.10.5 Final Test and Approval.—After all appliances have been connected and ready for operation, the Local Inspector shall be so notified.

2.10.6 Suspension of Work.—A Local Inspector may direct the immediate suspension of all or any portion of any gas-fitting on any premises by posting a notice to such effect on such premises whenever it appears to him that such gas-fitting is not being done in accordance with the permit issued in respect thereof.

2.11 Turning on Gas

2.11.1 Close All Gas Outlets.—Before turning gas under pressure into any piping, all openings from which gas can escape shall be closed.

2.11.2 Checking for Leakage with Meter.—Immediately after turning gas into piping, the system shall be checked to ascertain that no gas is escaping. This shall be done by carefully watching the test-dial of the meter to determine whether gas is passing through the meter. To assist in observing any movement of the test-hand, wet a small piece of paper and paste its edge directly over the centre line of the hand as soon as the gas is turned on. Allow five minutes for a ½-foot dial and proportionally longer for a larger dial in checking for a gas-flow. This observation should be made with the test-hand on the up-stroke.

2.11.3 In Case Test-hand Does Not Move.—In case careful observation of the test-hand for a sufficient length of time reveals no movement, the pipe shall be purged (see 2.12), and a small gas-burner turned on and lighted, and the hand of the test-dial observed. If the dial-hand now moves (as it should), it will show that the meter is operating properly. If the test-hand does not move or register the flow of gas through the meter to the small burner, it is certain that the meter is defective, and the gas should be turned off and the gas company notified.

2.11.4 In Case Meter Test-hand Moves.—In case the test-hand shows movement, all appliances or outlets supplied through the meter shall be examined to see if they are turned off and do not leak. If they are found tight, movement of the test-hand will indicate that there is a leak in the piping system.

The meter valve shall be turned off until the necessary repairs have been made, after which the test specified in 2.11.2 shall be repeated.

2.12 Purging

2.12.1 Purge All Gas-lines.—After piping has been checked, all piping receiving gas through the meter shall be fully purged. When purging a gas-line to an appliance, the pilot line shall be disconnected at the outlet of the pilot valve.

Under no circumstances shall a line be purged into the combustion-chamber of an appliance.

Under no circumstances shall an attempt be made to light the escaping gas while it is being purged through a pipe opening.

2.12.2 Light Pilots.—After the piping has been sufficiently purged, all appliances shall be purged and the pilots lighted. It shall be the responsibility of the contractor to purge all piping and appliances before he leaves the premises.

2.12.3 Purging Large Lines with Inert Gas.—Lines of 4-inch iron-pipe size or larger shall be purged with carbon dioxide, nitrogen, or a mixture of the two. For detailed procedure, consult the local gas company.

PART III

These regulations shall be observed during the installation of any gas appliance or accessory so as to assure safety and satisfactory service. In addition to the provisions outlined in this section, the provisions of Parts I, IV, V, and VI shall be observed.

3.1 General

3.1.1 Appliances and Accessories to Comply with Standard Requirements.—Every gas appliance and accessory designed for domestic or commercial use shall be of an approved type complying with the current listing requirements of an approved testing agency.

3.1.2 Type of Gas.—It shall be determined by the gas-fitter that the appliance he installs has been designed for use with the gas to which it will be connected. He shall not attempt to convert the appliance from the gas specified on the rating plate for use with a different gas without consulting the local gas company or the manufacturer of the appliance for complete instructions.

3.1.3 Permissible Temperatures on Combustible Materials.—All gas appliances and their flue or vent connectors shall be installed so that continued or intermittent operation will not create a hazard to persons or property. They shall not, during operation, raise the temperature of unprotected combustible walls, partitions, floors, or ceiling more than 90° F. above normal room temperature when measured with mercury thermometers or conventional bead-type thermocouples.

Minimum clearances between combustible walls and the back and sides of various types of appliances and their flue or vent connectors are specified in Parts IV and V.

3.1.4 Air for Combustion.—Appliances shall be installed in a location in which the facilities for ventilation permit satisfactory combustion of gas and proper venting, under normal conditions of use. While all forms of building construction cannot be covered in detail, this requirement may usually be met by application of one of the following methods in ordinary building construction:—

- (a) In buildings of conventional frame, brick, or stone construction without enclosed appliance-rooms, basement storm-windows, or tight stair doors, infiltration is normally adequate to provide air for combustion and draught-hood dilution.
- (b) Where appliances are installed in a confined space within a building, provision may be made for supplying this space with air for combustion and ventilation by eliminating the ceiling of the confined space; provided, however, that the area above this confined space freely communicates with the outdoors.
- (c) Where appliances are installed in a confined space within a building having adequate air infiltration, provisions shall be made for supplying this space with air for combustion and ventilation. This may be accomplished through use of two permanent openings freely communicating with interior areas of adequate infiltration or by compliance with provisions of item (b) or (d). These two permanent openings shall each have an area of not less than 1 square inch per 1,000 B.t.u. per hour of input rating. One opening shall be near the top of the confined space and one near the bottom. If necessary, continuous ducts having cross-sectional areas equal to the opening shall be utilized to communicate with the source of air-supply. The minimum dimensions of rectangular air-ducts shall not be less than 5 inches.
- (d) Where appliances are installed in a confined space within a building, the building being of unusually tight construction, air for combustion and ventilation must be obtained directly from outdoors or from spaces (crawl or attic) freely communicating with the outdoors. Under these conditions, the openings called for in (c) shall be replaced either by the provisions (b) above or by two openings having a combined area of not less than 1 square inch per 1,000 B.t.u. per hour of input rating. One opening shall be near the top of the enclosure and one near the bottom. These openings shall be of approximately equal area, and shall communicate with the selected source or sources of adequate air-supply by continuous ducts of the same cross-sectional area as the openings to which they connect. The minimum dimension of rectangular air-ducts shall be not less than 3 inches. Any duct from the top opening must be horizontal or pitched upward.
- (e) Where appliances are installed in unconfined spaces, such as a full basement, within a building of unusually tight construction, air for combustion and ventilation must be obtained from outdoors or from spaces freely communicating with the outdoors. Under these conditions a permanent opening or openings having a total free area of not less than 1 square inch per 1,000 B.t.u. per hour of input rating shall be provided. Where ducts are required, they shall be of the same cross-sectional area as the openings to which they connect. The minimum dimension of rectangular air-ducts shall be not less than 3 inches.

- (f) The size of combustion-air openings specified in 3.1.4 shall not necessarily govern in installations having a combination input in excess of 400,000 B.t.u. per hour.
- (g) Operations of exhaust-fans, kitchen ventilation systems, or fireplaces may create conditions requiring special attention to avoid unsatisfactory appliance operation.

3.1.5 Venting.—Appliances shall be vented in accordance with the provisions of Part V, Venting of Appliances.

3.1.6 Flammable Vapours.—Gas appliances shall not be installed in any location where flammable vapours are likely to be present, unless the design, operation, and installation are such as to eliminate the possible ignition of the flammable vapours.

3.1.7 Accessibility.—Every appliance shall be located so that it will be readily accessible for operation and servicing.

3.1.8 Avoid Strain on Piping.—Gas appliances shall be adequately supported and so connected to the piping as not to exert undue strain on the connections.

3.1.9 Extra Device or Attachment.—No device or attachment shall be installed on any appliance which may in any way impair the combustion of gas.

3.1.10 Combination of Appliances.—Any combination of appliances, attachments, or devices used together in any manner shall comply with the standards which apply to the individual appliances.

3.1.11 Use of Air or Oxygen under Pressure.—Where air or oxygen under pressure is used in connection with the gas-supply, effective means shall be provided to prevent air or oxygen from passing back into the gas-piping. The Local Inspector shall be consulted for details.

3.1.12 Venting of Pressure Regulations.—Gas-appliance pressure-regulators requiring access to the atmosphere for successful operation shall be equipped with a vent-pipe leading to the outer air or into the combustion-chamber adjacent to a constantly burning pilot, unless constructed or equipped to limit the escape of gas from the vent opening in the event of diaphragm failure to not more than 1.0 cubic foot per hour of a 0.6 specific gravity gas at 7 inches water-column pressure. In case of vents leading to the outer air, means shall be employed to prevent water from entering this pipe and also to prevent stoppage of it by insects and foreign matter. In case of vents entering the combustion-chamber, the vent shall be located so that the escaping gas will be readily ignited from the pilot flame and the heat liberated will not adversely affect the operation of the thermal element. The terminus of the vent shall be securely held in a fixed position relative to the pilot flame.

3.1.13 Any rented room or suite of rooms in which a gas appliance is or may be installed shall be given a number, and such number shall be affixed conspicuously to the door or door-jamb of such room.

3.2 Appliance Connections to Building Piping

3.2.1 Connecting Non-portable Appliances.—Non-portable appliances, such as central heating, water-heating, and similar equipment, shall be connected to the gas-piping with rigid pipe or by approved semi-rigid tubing not more than 3 feet in length.

3.2.2 Connecting Ranges, Hot-plates, Refrigerators, and Similar Equipment.—Domestic gas ranges, hot-plates, refrigerators, and similar equipment shall be connected to the gas-piping with rigid pipe, approved semi-rigid tubing, or approved appliance connectors, or flexible metal tubing and fittings. When a semi-rigid tubing connector or a connector of flexible metal tubing and fittings is used, it shall connect to an outlet in the same room as the appliance. The length of the connector shall not exceed 6 feet. The connector shall be installed so as to be protected against mechanical injury.

3.2.3 Use of Gas-hose.—Only appliances which are fully portable in nature shall be connected with gas-hose. Appliances equipped with a control valve or valves which permit complete shut-off of the gas-supply shall not be connected with gas-hose. This requirement does not apply to hand-torches, gas irons, and other equipment which require both the mobility possible only with flexible connections and frequent and accurate burner-control at the point of use. Gas-hose should not be confused with semi-rigid tubing or appliance connectors of flexible metal tubing and fittings. Only listed gas-hose shall be used. Listed gas-hose shall be used only in accordance with the terms of its listing. Gas-hose shall not be used where it is likely to be subject to excessive temperatures (above 125° F.).

3.2.4 Gas-valves.—Where gas-hose connection is made, a listed gas-valve shall always be provided on the supply piping where the hose is attached. When gas-hose is used with an appliance having a valve on the inlet of the appliance, the valve shall be removed so that the user is compelled to use the valve at the pipe end, except as provided by 3.2.3. A gas shut-off valve which constitutes the only means of gas-control shall be easily accessible and within convenient reaching distance when operating the burner of the appliance.

3.2.5 Capacity and End Connections.—Gas-hose shall be of adequate capacity, gas-tight, and so designed as to permit the secure attachment to the nozzle of fully portable appliances which do not require mobility during operation and to hose-end valves connected to the house-piping. Where the gas-hose is equipped with rubber slip-end connections, the gas shut-off valve at the house-piping shall be a listed hose-end gas-valve or shall have a standard hose-end nozzle attached to it. Where an appliance requires mobility during operation, such as a gas iron or hand-torch, and is always used in the same location, the gas-hose shall be permanently attached at the supply end by a threaded or other secure metal connection, and the appliance end shall be provided with a secure metal joint which can be conveniently made and separated.

3.2.6 Permissible Length and Location.—Where gas-hose is used, it shall be of the minimum practical length, but not to exceed 6 feet, and shall not extend from one room to another nor pass through any walls, partitions, ceilings, or floors. Under no circumstances shall gas-hose be concealed from view or used in a concealed location.

3.3 Electrical Connections

3.3.1 Electrical Connections.—All electrical connections between gas appliances and the building wiring shall be in full compliance with "Electrical Energy Inspection Act."

3.3.2 Electric Ignition and Control Devices.—No devices employing or depending upon an electrical current shall be used to control or ignite a gas-supply if of such character that failure of the electrical current could result in the escape of unburned gas or in failure to reduce the supply of gas under conditions which would normally result in its reduction unless other means are provided to prevent the development of dangerous temperatures, pressures, or the escape of gas.

3.3.3 Electrical Ground.—The gas-piping shall not be used for an electrical ground, nor shall electric circuits utilize gas-piping, casing of controls, panels, or other metal parts in lieu of wiring. This provision shall not apply to low-voltage control and ignition circuits, and to electronic flame-detection device circuits incorporated as part of the appliance.

3.3.4 Electrical Circuit.—The electrical circuit employed for operating the automatic main gas-control valve, automatic pilot, room-temperature thermostat, limit-control, or other electrical devices used with the gas appliance shall be in accordance with the wiring diagrams supplied with the appliance.

3.4 Room-temperature Thermostats

3.4.1 Locations.—To assure good response by the room-temperature thermostat, it should be located where it will be in the natural circulating path of room air. Avoid locations which would expose the device to cold-air infiltration, or draughts from windows, doors, or other openings leading to the outside, or to air currents from warm- or cold-air registers, or where the natural circulation of the air is cut off, such as behind doors, above or below mantels, shelves, or in corners. Placing a thermostat which controls a central-heating appliance in a bedroom, bathroom, or kitchen is not recommended.

PART IV

4.1 Domestic Ranges

4.1.1 Clearance from Combustible Construction.—The location of a domestic gas range shall be such as not to constitute a hazard to persons or property. In the application of this requirement, appropriate consideration shall be given to the design and construction of the range and the combustibility of the floor, wall, or partition. Domestic gas ranges, when installed on combustible floors, shall be set on their own bases or legs, and shall be installed with clearances not less than those shown in Table 5. In no case shall the clearances be such as to interfere with the requirements for combustion air and accessibility (see 3.1.4 and 3.1.7).

4.1.2 Clearance for Flue-pipe.—Where a flue or vent connector is attached to a domestic gas range, suitable provisions shall be made for the protection of adjacent combustible construction from excessive temperatures (see 5.4.7).

Room or space heaters shall be installed with clearances not less than specified in Table 7, except that appliances listed for installation at lesser clearances may be installed in accordance with their listing. In no case shall the clearances be such as to interfere with the requirements of combustion air and accessibility (see 3.1.4 and 3.1.7).

Circulating Type: Room-heaters having an outer jacket surrounding the combustion-chamber, arranged with openings at top and bottom so that air circulates between the inner and outer jacket, and without openings in the outer jacket to permit direct radiation, shall have clearances at sides and rear of less than 12 inches.

Radiating Type: Room-heaters other than those described above as of circulating type shall have clearances at sides and rear of not less than 18 inches, except that heaters which make use of metal, asbestos, or ceramic material to direct radiation to the front of the appliance shall have a clearance of 36 inches in front, and if constructed with a double back of metal or ceramic may be installed with a clearance of 18 inches at sides and 12 inches at rear.

4.5.2 Clearances.—Central-heating boilers and furnaces shall be installed with clearances not less than specified in Table 8, except that appliances listed for installation at lesser clearances may be installed in accordance with their listings. In no case shall the clearance be such as to interfere with the requirements for combustion air and accessibility (see 3.1.4 and 4.6.4).

4.5.3 Erection and Mounting.—A central-heating boiler or furnace shall be erected in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions, and shall be installed on a firm, level, fire-proof foundation unless listed for installation on a combustible floor, or the floor is protected in an approved manner.

4.5.4 Accessibility.—The installation of central-heating boilers and furnaces shall be such as to make them accessible for cleaning of heating-surfaces, removal of burners, replacement of sections, motors, controls, filters, draught hoods, and other working parts, and for adjustment and lubrication of parts requiring such attention.

- (c) Where the appliance is set on legs which provide not less than 4 inches under the base of the appliance, it may be mounted on combustible floors, provided the floor under the appliance is protected with hollow masonry not less than 4 inches in thickness covered with sheet metal of not less than No. 18 U.S. standard gauge. Such masonry courses shall be laid with ends unsealed and joints matched in such a way as to provide for free circulation of air through the masonry. The hollow masonry shall be kept in place by a holding-strip fastened to the floor on all four sides. The ends of hollow masonry shall be not less than 3 inches from any wall or obstruction.
- (d) Where the appliance does not have legs at least 4 inches high, it may be mounted on combustible floors, provided the floor under the appliance is protected by two courses of 4-inch hollow clay tile or equivalent with courses laid at right angles and with ends unsealed and joints matched in such a way as to provide for free circulation of air through such masonry courses and covered with steel plate not less than No. 18 U.S. standard gauge. The tile shall be kept in place by a holding-strip fastened to the floor on all four sides. The ends of the tile shall be not less than 3 inches from any wall or obstruction.

4.15.2 Clearance for Appliances.—Hotel and restaurant ranges, deep fat fryers, and unit broilers shall be installed at least 6 inches from combustible construction, except that at least a 2-inch clearance shall be maintained between the flue-box or draught hood and combustible construction. Appliances designed and marked "For use only in fire-proof locations" shall not be installed elsewhere.

4.15.3 Combustible Construction Adjacent to Cooking-top.—Any portion of combustible construction closer than 18 inches to a cooking-top section of a hotel or restaurant range, even though certified for close to wall installation, which is not shielded from the wall by a high shelf, warming-closet, etc., shall be protected for a distance of at least 3 feet above surface of the cooking-top by sheet metal of not less than No. 26 U.S. standard gauge. This sheet metal shall be fastened to the combustible construction by thimbles, spaced at not less than 2-foot vertical and horizontal intervals, and provide 1½-inch clearance between the sheet and combustible construction. In such cases the clearance between the sheet and the appliance shall be not less than 4½ inches. Where sheet-metal protection is used, the protection shall extend at least 12 inches beyond the back, side, top, or any other part of the appliance, and the space between the sheet metal and combustible construction shall be open on both sides or top and bottom to permit circulation of air.

4.15.4 Install Level.—All hotel and restaurant ranges, deep fat fryers, and unit broilers shall be installed level on a firm foundation.

4.15.5 Ventilation.—Adequate means shall be provided to properly ventilate the space in which hotel and restaurant equipment is installed to permit proper combustion of the gas.

4.16 Gas Counter Appliances

4.16.1 Vertical Clearance.—A vertical distance of not less than 48 inches shall be provided between the top of all commercial hot-plates and griddles and combustible construction.

4.16.2 Appliances.—Gas counter appliances, such as commercial hot-plates and griddles, food and dish warmers, coffee brewers and urns, waffle-bakers, and hot-water immersion sterilizers, etc., when installed on combustible surfaces, shall be set on their own bases or legs, and shall be installed with a minimum horizontal clearance of 6 inches from combustible construction.

4.17 Portable Gas Baking and Roasting Ovens

4.17.1 Portable gas baking and roasting ovens shall be installed at least 6 inches from combustible construction, except that at least a 2-inch clearance shall be maintained between the flue-box or draught hood and combustible construction. Appliances designed and marked "For use only in fire-proof locations" shall not be installed elsewhere.

PART V

VENTING OF APPLIANCES

5.1.1 Appliances Requiring Flues or Vents.—With the exception of domestic gas ranges, domestic clothes-driers, and radiant heaters designed for use without a vent, or appliances which are installed in a masonry fireplace with an approved opening in the damper, every gas appliance shall be connected to an effective flue or vent if it is included in any of the following classifications:—

- (a) Any appliance installed for domestic purposes having an input rating in excess of 50,000 B.t.u. per hour.
- (b) Automatically controlled appliances which use more than 5,000 B.t.u. per hour.
- (c) Automatically controlled appliances which use less than 5,000 B.t.u. per hour, unless equipped with an automatic pilot or a flame-responsive fuel shut-off device.
- (d) Any appliance, excluding domestic gas ranges, installed in the same room which if not vented would make the total input rating of the unvented gas appliances as great as 30 B.t.u. per hour per cubic foot of room content.
- (e) Heaters in any room in institutions, hospitals, or any place frequented by the public.

5.2 Draught Hoods

5.2.1 Draught Hoods.—Every vented appliance, except incinerators, dual-oven type combination ranges, and units designed for power burners or for forced venting shall have a draught hood. If the draught hood is not a part of the appliance or supplied by the appliance-manufacturer, it shall be supplied by the installer, and in the absence of other instructions shall be the same size as the appliance flue-collar. (For suggested general dimensions for such draught hoods, see Figs. 14, 15, and 16.)

5.2.2 Installation of Draught Hoods.—Where the draught hood is a part of the appliance or is supplied by the appliance-manufacturer, it shall be installed without alteration in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions. In the absence of manufacturer's instructions, the draught hood shall be attached to the flue-collar of the appliance, or as near to the appliance as conditions permit. In no case shall a draught hood be installed in a false ceiling, in a different room, or in any manner that will permit a difference in pressure between the draught-hood relief opening and the combustion-air supply.

5.2.3 Position of Draught Hood.—A draught hood shall be installed in the position for which it was designed with reference to the horizontal and vertical planes, and shall be so located that the relief opening is not obstructed by any part of the appliance or adjacent construction.

5.2.4 Special Draught Hoods.—Where the installer must supply a draught hood of special design, advice of the local gas company or Local Inspector as to its use should be secured.

5.3 Types of Flues or Vents

5.3.1 Type A Flue or Vents (see Definitions).—Type A flue or vents shall be employed for venting:—

- (a) All incinerators.
- (b) All appliances which may be converted readily to the use of solid or liquefied fuels.
- (c) All boilers and warm-air furnaces, except where the Local Inspector approves the use of Type B gas flues or vents.

5.3.2 Type B Gas Flues or Vents (see Definitions).—Type B gas flues or vents shall be used only with approved gas appliances which produce flue-gas temperatures not in excess of 550° F. at the outlet of the draught hood when burning gas at the manufacturer's normal input rating and not specified by 5.3.1 to be vented to Type A flues or vents.

For the purpose of this provision, appliances, with the exception of incinerators and conversion burners, may be accepted as producing flue-gas temperatures not in excess of 550° F. at the outlet of the draught hood.

5.3.3 Marking of Gas Flues or Vents Not Suitable for Other Fuels.—Chimneys, flues, or vents installed for use with gas appliances but which are not suitable for solid or liquid fuels shall be plainly and permanently labeled by the installer: "This flue is for use of gas-burning appliances only." The label shall be attached to the wall or ceiling at a point where the flue or vent connector enters the chimney, or where a Type B gas flue or vent is used in place of a chimney, at a point near where the Type B gas flue or vent or the flue or vent connector enters the wall or ceiling.

5.3.4 Type C Gas Flues or Vents.—Type C gas flues or vents shall be used only for runs directly within the space in which the appliance is located. Such flues or vents shall not pass through any attic or concealed space nor through any floor or wall. Installation with reference to clearance to combustible construction shall comply with provisions of 5.4.7 and 5.4.8.

5.4 Flue or Vent Connectors

5.4.1 Materials.—Metallic vent-pipes shall not be lighter than No. 25 U.S. standard gauge iron for all sizes smaller than 6 inches in diameter, No. 24 U.S. standard gauge for sizes 6 to 8 inches in diameter, and No. 22 U.S. standard gauge for sizes over 8 inches in diameter. Such materials shall have corrosion-resistant qualities equal to or better than galvanized iron, except that black stove-pipe iron may be used for vents for gas ranges.

5.4.2 Avoid Bends.—The flue or vent connector shall be installed so as to avoid short turns or other constructional features which would create resistance to the flows of flue gases.

5.4.3 Pitch.—The pitch of a flue or vent connector from the appliance to the flue or vent shall not be less than one-quarter inch to the foot, and greater if possible. The horizontal run, shall be free from dips or sags.

5.4.4 Provide Vertical Run.—Wherever sufficient head-room is available, appliances having a horizontal flue outlet shall be provided with a vertical run of flue or vent connector before the horizontal run. To minimize frictional resistance in the connector, 45-degree elbows should be used where practicable.

5.4.5 Length.—The horizontal run of the connector shall be short as possible, and the appliance shall be located as near the flue or vent as practicable. The maximum length of horizontal run shall not exceed 75 per cent of the height of the flue or vent, and in no case shall exceed 20 feet.

5.4.6 Support.—Flue or vent connectors shall be securely supported.

5.4.7 Clearance.—Flue or vent connectors shall be located in such a manner that continued operation of the appliance will not raise the temperature of surrounding combustible construction more than 90° F. above normal room temperature when measured with mercury thermometers or conventional bead-type thermocouples. Where flue or vent connectors pass through partitions of combustible construction, ventilated thimbles shall be used. Minimum clearances from combustible construction to flue or vent connectors for appliances are shown in Table 9.

5.4.8 Use of Thimbles.—Flue or vent connectors other than Type B shall not pass through any combustible walls or partitions unless they are guarded at the point of passage by ventilated metal thimbles not smaller than the following:—

For appliances except floor furnaces and incinerators, 4 inches larger in diameter than the flue or vent connector, unless there is a run of not less than 6 feet of flue or vent connector in the open, between the draught hood outlet and the thimble, in which case the thimble may be 2 inches larger in diameter than the flue or vent connector.

For floor furnaces, 6 inches larger in diameter than the flue or vent connector.

For incinerators, 12 inches larger in diameter than the flue or vent connector.

5.4.9 Size.—The flue or vent connector shall not be smaller than the size of the flue-collar or the size of the outlet of the draught hood supplied by the manufacturer of a gas-designed appliance. Where the appliance has more than one flue outlet, and in the absence of the manufacturer's specific instructions, the flue or vent connector shall equal the combined area of the flue outlets for which it acts as a common connector to the flue or vent.

5.4.10 No Dampers.—No manually operated damper shall be placed in any flue or vent connector. Fixed baffles ahead of draught hoods are not classified as dampers.

5.4.11 Fireplace.—A flue or vent connector shall not be connected to a chimney flue having a fireplace opening unless the opening is permanently sealed.

5.5 Flues or Vents

This section shall apply to natural-draught venting only. Forced-draught or exhaust systems and power burners usually require special engineering and installation, and shall be approved by the Chief Engineer-Surveyor.

5.5.1 Check Chimney.—Before connecting a flue or vent connector, the flue or vent shall be examined to ascertain that it is properly constructed, clear, and will freely conduct the products of combustion to the outer air.

5.5.2 Size.—The flue or vent to which the flue or vent connector is connected shall be of a size equal to the draught-hood collar or as specified in Table 12. In no case shall the area be less than the area of 3-inch-diameter pipe. When more than one appliance vents into a flue or vent, the flue or vent area shall be not less than the area of the largest flue or vent connector plus 50 per cent of the areas of the additional flue or vent connectors. An elliptical or rectangular flue or vent may be used, provided its flue-gas venting capacity as determined from manufacturer's capacity tables is equal to the capacity of round pipe for which it is substituted.

5.5.3 Height.—The flue or vent shall extend high enough above the building or other neighbouring obstruction so that wind from any direction will not strike the flue or vent from an angle above horizontal.

5.5.4 Chimney Entrance.—In entering a chimney flue the connection shall be above the extreme bottom to avoid stoppage. Means shall be employed which will prevent the flue or vent connector from entering so far as to unduly restrict the space between its end and the opposite wall of the chimney. A thimble or slip joint shall be used to facilitate removal of the flue or vent connector for cleaning.

5.5.5 Clean-outs.—Clean-outs shall be of such construction that they will remain tightly closed when not in use.

5.5.6 Venting into Flues Used for Other Fuels.—A gas appliance automatically controlled may be connected through separate openings to a flue which also serves equipment for the combustion of solid or liquid fuel, or may be connected through a single opening if joined as close as practical to the flue. If two or more openings are provided into one flue they should be at different levels.

5.5.7 Flue Connecting Two or More Gas Appliances.—In order to promote better draught where more than one gas-appliance flue or vent connector is connected to a flue or vent, the connections shall be made at different levels. Two or more gas appliances may be vented through a common flue or vent connector when necessary, if joined as close as practical to the flue or vent, and provided the size of the common flue or vent is sufficient to accommodate the total volume of flue gases.

5.5.8 Unlined Chimney.—Unlined chimneys may be used when approved by the Local Inspector.

5.6 Outside Flues or Vents

5.6.1 Restrictions.—Gravitational venting through an outside wall shall be prohibited.

Where it is impractical to vent an appliance into an approved gravity flue or vent, an approved system of power venting shall be employed which prevents the operation of the appliance if draught fails.

Outside flues and vents shall not terminate directly below a window, door, or intake ventilator, or within 4 feet thereof. No flue or vent shall project from out of a building into any street other than a lane.

5.6.2 Material.—When it is necessary to extend the flue from a power vent, the outside portion shall be a Class B vent.

PART VI

PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED TO PLACE AN APPLIANCE IN OPERATION

6.1 Adjusting the Burner Input

6.1.1 Adjusting Burner.—It shall be the responsibility of the gas-fitter to adjust and test each appliance that he has installed and leave it operating in accordance with the manufacturer's specifications. Overgassing of burners is prohibited.

6.1.2 High Altitude.—Gas appliances listed for high-altitude operation shall be adjusted to the high-altitude input rating shown on the name-plate when installed at elevations between 2,000 and 5,000 feet above sea-level. When installed at elevations above 5,000 feet, the listed high-altitude rating shall be reduced at the rate of 4 per cent for each additional 1,000 feet. Appliances not listed for high-altitude operation and installed at elevations above 3,000 feet shall have their ratings reduced at the rate of 4 per cent for each 1,000 feet above sea-level.

6.1.3 Checking Burner Input.—To check the B.t.u. input rate, the test-hand on the meter should be timed for at least one revolution and the input determined from this timing. Test-dials are generally marked ½, 1, 2, or 5 cubic feet per revolution, depending upon the size of the meter. Instructions for converting the test-hand readings to cubic feet per hour are given in Table 11.

6.1.4 Adjusting Input.—The input rate shall be adjusted to the required rate by changing a fixed orifice size, changing the adjustment of an adjustable orifice, or by readjustment of the gas-pressure regulator outlet pressure (when a regulator is provided).

6.2 Primary-air Adjustment

6.2.1 The primary air for injection (Bunsen) type burners shall be adjusted for proper flame characteristics in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions. Normally the primary-air adjustment should first be set to give a soft blue flame having luminous tips and then increased to a point where the yellow tips just disappear. If the burner cannot be adjusted as above, consult the manufacturer or local gas company. After setting the primary air, the adjustment means shall be secured in position.

6.3 Automatic Pilots

6.3.1 The automatic pilot of the device shall effect immediate ignition of the gas at the main burner when the gas-supply to the pilot is reduced to a point where the flame is just sufficient to keep the valve of the device open.

6.4 Automatic Ignition

6.4.1 Appliances equipped with means for automatic ignition, such as used with domestic gas-range top burners, shall be checked to assure proper operation. If necessary, proper adjustments shall be made.

6.5 Protective Devices

6.5.1 All protective devices and manual operating features shall be checked to assure proper operation.

6.6 Checking the Draught

6.6.1 On flue-connected appliances, the appliance shall be operated and the installation checked to see that the products of combustion are going up the flue or vent properly. If the products of combustion are escaping from the relief opening of the draught hood, the appliance shall not be left in operation until proper adjustments or repairs are made to assure adequate draught through the flue or vent.

6.7 Instructions to the Customer

6.7.1 Instruct Consumer.—The gas-fitter shall instruct by demonstration how to operate the appliance properly and safely before it is left in operation.

6.7.2 Post Instructions.—When operating instructions are furnished by the manufacturer, they shall be left with the consumer or posted in a prominent position near the appliance.

6.8 Notification of Completion

6.8.1 The Local Inspector shall be notified as soon as the installation has been completed.

PART VII

7.1 Municipal Fees and Penalties

7.1.1 Fees.—Each municipality may set the fees for permits, inspections, special inspections, and such other fees as deemed necessary for work done under these regulations within the boundaries of such municipality.

7.1.2 Fines and Penalties.—Every person who violates any provision of these regulations shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a fine of not more than $100.

7.1.3 All fines and penalties imposed under these regulations in prosecutions upon information laid by any Local Inspector in any municipality in respect of any offence committed within such municipality shall, when paid or recovered, be paid over to such municipality for use as a part of the municipal revenue.

The following solution is based on Fig 1A:—

Solution

Maximum gas demand of Outlet B, 3 cubic feet per hour (from Table 1).
Maximum gas demand of Outlet C, 62.5 cubic feet per hour (from Table 1).

- Maximum gas demand of Outlet C, 150 cubic feet per hour (150,000 B.t.u. per hour, 1,000).
- (2) The length of pipe from the start of the house-piping to the most remote outlet (Outlet A) is 60 feet. This is the only distance used.
- (3) Using column marked 60 feet in Table 2:—
- Outlet A, supplying 30 cubic feet per hour, requires ½-inch pipe.
- Outlet B, supplying 3 cubic feet per hour, requires ½-inch pipe.
- Outlet C, supplying 62.5 cubic feet per hour, requires ¾-inch pipe (due to range connection being ¾-inch).
- Outlet D, supplying 150 cubic feet per hour, requires 1-inch pipe.
- (4) Section 1, supplying Outlet A or 30 cubic feet per hour, requires ½-inch pipe.
- Section 2, supplying Outlet B or 3 cubic feet per hour, requires ½-inch pipe.
- Section 3, supplying Outlets A and B or 33 cubic feet per hour, requires ½-inch pipe.
- Section 4, supplying Outlet C or 62.5 cubic feet per hour, requires ¾-inch pipe.
- Section 5, supplying Outlets A, B, and C. or 95.5 cubic feet per hour, requires 1-inch pipe.
- Section 6, supplying Outlet D or 150 cubic feet per hour, requires 1-inch pipe.
- Section 7, supplying Outlets A, B, C, and D or 245.5 cubic feet per hour, requires 1¼-inch pipe.

(Order in Council No. 1851)

INTERPRETATION

1. In these regulations the expression:—

"Act" means the "Gas Act";

"A.G.A." means American Gas Association;

"Approval" means acceptance by the Board of a complete self-contained gas-burning appliance;

"Department" means the Gas Inspection Branch of the Department of Public Works;

"Inspector" means an Inspector of the Department;

"Listing" means acceptance by the Board of an accessory which contributes to a complete gas-burning appliance.

All other expressions shall have the same meaning as in the Act.

GENERAL

3. Interim approval of a gas appliance or interim listing of an accessory may be granted by the Board pending arrangements for the testing of such appliances in the laboratories of the British Columbia Research Council or other testing agency.

5. Applications for interim approval shall be made on a form supplied by the Department and submitted with drawings and specifications in triplicate to the Chief Engineer-Surveyor.

7. A specimen of the appliance for which approval is sought shall be made available to the Department for inspection and testing to destruction if necessary. The applicant shall provide without charge to the Department such assistance, tools, workshop accommodation, testing equipment, and transportation as may be considered necessary by the Inspector.

9. If an appliance complies in all respects with the standards required under section 19, the Department shall issue to the applicant a certificate of interim approval or listing for the particular model tested or inspected, which certificate shall be effective only until approval is obtained through a testing agency or until the expiry date of the certificate, which may be renewed on application.

11. Upon receipt of the certificate of interim approval or listing the applicant shall apply the appropriate seal on all units produced, manufactured, sold, or offered for sale by him which conform in all respects to the model approved or listed.

13. The applicant shall make available for inspection at the applicant's point of production or place of business, upon request of an Inspector, current production units of any or all models or types of appliances covered by current certificates or to which the seal is affixed or intended to be affixed.

15. If the Board determines that an appliance which has been approved is nevertheless found to be hazardous to health, life, or property while in service, the Board may withdraw approval and revoke the certificate on such appliance pending the completion of additional and corrective requirements to eliminate such hazard. All expenses in making corrections under this section shall be borne by the manufacturer.

17. (a) The applicant shall sell only the models or types designated in a current certificate of interim approval or listing held by him.

(b) If any alteration or change is made by the applicant in such model or type, the same shall be submitted again for interim approval before it may be sold or displayed bearing the approval seal.

19. Except as otherwise provided in these regulations, the minimum standards governing the design, fabrication, or testing of gas appliances shall be those set forth in the current "Approval Requirements," "Installation Requirements," and "Listing Requirements," published by the American Gas Association, and any subsequent amendments, addenda, or additions thereto when such have been approved by the Board.

21. Where any rule of these regulations is at variance with the A.G.A. requirements, these regulations shall govern.

23. The Board shall have power to formulate rules in cases where the standards mentioned in section 19 of these regulations are inadequate or where special circumstances render desirable alteration or modification of said standards.
